TWO TELEGRAMS CREATED STIR

President Alternately Criticised and Upheld in Senate.

MESSAGES HELD INNOCENT

Senator Lodge Tells "Whole Story" of Coolidge's Telegrams to McLean. Senator Harrison Declares Disclosures "Will Further Undermine Public Confidence in Government." Other Telegrams Read.

Washington, March 7.—The senate committee probing the oil land leases made public two telegrams sent by President Coolidge to Edward B. McLean, Washington publisher, during the month of February.

One telegram was explained by the president, who said it was in response to congratulations from McLean on the president's Lincoln day speech. The telegram was dated Feb. 12. (The president's Lincoln day speech was delivered the night of Feb. 12 in New York.) Two or three hours later a second explanation of this telegram was made, saying it was in response to a message of congratulation from McLean on another matter. Three statements in all were issued from the white house. The first was in explanation of a telegram having to do with a district commissioner-ship, sent Jan. 12.

Senator Lodge (Rep., Mass.), stating that he spoke on the authority of President Coolidge, offered the senate what he called "the whole story" of Coolidge's telegrams to McLean. Lodge said the telegrams were "perfectly innocent."

"Mr. Prescott is chairman of the Republican committee of the District of Columbia and a very reputable man," Lodge said. "The president sent for him to ask him about some District of Columbia matters. The president was away. Being unable to ascertain from any one here the information he desired, the president attempted to get in touch with his secretary in Florida. Mr. Slemph was moving about from place to place and the president did not know his exact address. It was 9:30 at night, and none of his secretaries was about. He knew Mr. McLean would know where Mr. Slemph was. Therefore, he wired his secretary through McLean for the purpose of getting the name of the man he desired to see in Washington. And that is the whole story of the telegram of Jan. 12."

Coolidge's Messages.
The first of two telegrams sent by President Coolidge to Edward B. McLean at Palm Beach read: "Prescott is away. Advise Slemph with whom I shall confer." The second read: "Thank you for your message. You have always been most considerate. Mrs. Coolidge joins me in kindest regards to you and Mrs. McLean."

Bitter debate in the senate and a row within the senate committee followed the reading of the telegrams and the explanations. The committee upon going into executive session got into a row over a reported "leak" which gave Mr. Coolidge advance information Wednesday that the telegrams were to be read. Committee members said the president, notified of what occurred in secret committee meeting, called a meeting of his advisers at the white house to discuss the developments.

The whole matter was carried to the senate floor later when Senator Harrison (Dem., Miss.) in a bitter speech said the disclosures involving Mr. Coolidge would further undermine the public's confidence in the government and demand a full and frank explanation from the white house.

"It's bad enough when men employed at the white house communicate with McLean, when he admits that he has deceived the country and that the secret codes of the department of justice were used by McLean," said Harrison. "But when it is known that McLean with all the guilt heaped on him, seeks out the president of the United States for information, what are we to think?" he asked.

Reading of other telegrams disclosed that H. E. McKenna, doorkeeper at the white house office notified McLean in Palm Beach of Slemph's departure for Florida on the day Slemph left; that Bernard M. Baruch, New York financier and prominent figure in the war-time administration, was in communication with McLean at Palm Beach and sent him "affectionate regards," that Senator Smoot, a member of the senate committee, was in direct communication with Albert B. Fall, chief figure in the scandal; that William J. Burns, head of the secret service of the department of justice, notified McLean of an investigation of his connection with the department as a "dollar-a-year man"; and that Fall and Senator Leffort, chairman of the senate investigating committee, exchanged messages regarding the summoning of witnesses in the inquiry.

STUDENTS INJURED

Explosion Occurs in Laboratory of an Ohio High School.

Steubenville, O., March 7.—Three pounds of gunpowder exploded in the laboratory of the high school at Toronto, this county, injuring nine persons, five seriously. Twenty-five persons were in the classroom when the blast occurred. The laboratory was wrecked. Four hundred students in the building were thrown into a panic. The seriously injured are: Professor Harold M. Ruch, chemistry instructor; Esther Jones, Therna Dodd, Gladden Warren and Bryton Eddy, students.

The explosion occurred when a spark in an electrical experiment ignited the gunpowder. The injured were rushed to an emergency hospital in Toronto. Many of them suffered from severe burns about the head, some losing all their hair.

SPECIAL COUNSEL APPEALS TO COURT

Would Halt Withdrawal of Oil
From Reserves.

Washington, March 7.—Court action to stop further withdrawal of oil from naval reserves has been begun by the special counsel, as a preliminary to filing suit for annulment of the leases.

A preliminary hearing on a petition for injunction to stop further oil withdrawals from the Sinclair leases in Teapot Dome will be held March 13 at Cheyenne, Wyo., it was announced at the office of Atlee Pomerene and Owen Roberts, the special counsel. Immediately thereafter, a similar injunction will be asked for in Los Angeles regarding the Doheny leases.

A special federal grand jury to consider criminal prosecutions of persons involved in the leasing will be convened in Washington about April 1, it was stated.

FORBES GIVES BOND

Pleads Not Guilty to Charges of Conspiracy to Defraud Government.

Washington, March 7.—Charles R. Forbes, former veterans' bureau head, gave $10,000 bond for appearance before the federal court in Chicago on March 17. Forbes appeared before United States Commissioner George H. MacDonald here, and pleaded not guilty to two charges of conspiracy to defraud the United States government and one charge of accepting a bribe. Forbes was indicted by a Chicago grand jury on charges of accepting a bribe from contracting interests headed by J. W. Thompson, St. Louis, and of having entered into agreement with a group of contractors to allot to them all veterans' bureau construction contracts.

CRABBE REPLIES TO HIS CRITICS

"Could Not Wink at Violation of Important Laws."

DEFENDS HIS RECENT RULING

Attorney General Declares He Does Not Believe Law Enforcement in Ohio Depends on Division of Fines. Commissioner McDonald Predicts Law Enforcement as the Result of Outlawing State "Card" Agents.

Columbus, March 7.—Replying to criticisms of his ruling against state "card agents," Attorney General Crabbe said:

"If the fee-splitting policy deserves the condemnation it has received, even from the prohibition department itself, and it does, and if these appointments are clearly in violation of law, and they are, how can any law-abiding citizen condemn this opinion? I would be betraying the people of Ohio if I winked at the violation of one of the most important laws on the statute books and embodied in the constitution, and declared the appointment of these men who are commercializing law enforcement, to be legal. Officers of the law must themselves obey the law if Ohio is to expect obedience to law. Officers can not be permitted to violate one law in order to enforce another by questionable means.

"I do not believe law enforcement in this state depends on the division of fines. To make such an admission is to admit our government is a failure. I have confidence in the people of Ohio and in the courts and officials who enforce the law from a sense of duty."

The American Issue, official publication of the Ohio Anti-Saloon league, in an article in this week's issue discussing the discharge of 110 state "card" agents and Crabbe's ruling, which was responsible, intimates that Governor Donahey and Attorney General Crabbe are both "playing politics" at the expense of prohibition enforcement. "It must be remembered," says the article, "that the attorney general and governor are of opposite politics and there is good reason to believe there is some attempt to play politics at the expense of dry enforcement."

"The governor and attorney general are both in sympathy with the dry law, but this is a big political year and one of them is a Democrat and the other is a Republican."

Crabbe is criticised by the article because of the way in which the question of the legality of the "card" agents was raised. "Contrary to precedent, the attorney general rendered this opinion without it being first asked for officially," it says. "It made good first-page publicity."

The Anti-Saloon league is opposed to the "so-called commercialized enforcement of the dry laws and the splitting of fees," the article concludes, and "believes the state should pay" all the enforcement officers.

Prohibition Commissioner McDonald predicted that Governor Donahey will be flooded with complaints of lax law enforcement on the part of local authorities, as a result of the abolishment of state "card" prohibition agents. Prohibition law in many cities and communities has been almost entirely enforced by the "card" officers, it was pointed out by McDonald. He added the prohibition department will not be able to employ any additional "temporary" inspectors, paid by the state, to supplement its present force, until additional money is appropriated for it.

It was intimated that Crabbe's ruling may be tested by some form of court action. Prohibition department and Governor Donahey denied that this was being planned, as far as they were concerned, and stated that Crabbe's ruling would be followed literally by them.

REDUCES INCOME TAXES FOR 1923

Resolution Reported by Senate
Finance Committee.

PROVIDES FOR 25 PER CENT CUT

Would Permit Taxpayers to Get Benefit of Rebate Provision of Pending Revenue Measure—Identity of Two Representatives Charged With Bribery Demanded by House Members—Bonus Bill to Be Reported.

Washington, March 7.—The senate finance committee voted to report immediately a resolution providing for a 25 per cent reduction on personal income taxes for 1923, which are payable March 15 this year.

This would permit taxpayers to get the benefit of the rebate provision of the pending tax bill, which can not now be passed by March 15.

The house ways and means committee voted 16 to 3 to report out a soldier bonus bill. Representative Treadway of Massachusetts, Theron of Connecticut and Mills of New York, all Republicans, opposed the legislation.

The form of the bill is yet to be decided. It will be worked out from the four plans now pending before the committee as follows: A straight cash bonus; a straight paid-up insurance bonus; a cash bonus with a paid-up insurance option and a four-year plan with option of $50 cash, deferred payment certificates, vocational training and home and farm aid.

A resolution calling on the department of justice for the identity of two house members charged with bribery in the Chicago grand jury's veterans' bureau report was reported by the house rules committee. The department also is asked to give exact charges against the two members. The action of the committee was unanimous.

Debate on the bill providing acceptance of the Ford offer for Muscle Shoals proceeded in the house. It was featured by a bitter attack on Ford by Representative Laguardia (Rep., N. Y.), who declared that if given Muscle Shoals, Ford would become the "industrial king" of the nation, and that it was possible, in the event of war, that he might be "bound on a peace ship trying to get the boys out of the trenches." He added that the only person Mr. Ford got out of the trenches in the last war was "his own son."

Representative Garrett (Dem., Tex.) warmly indorsed the Ford proposal. The manufacture of nitrate and fertilizer, he said, are the primary things to consider in the development of Muscle Shoals and not water power.

Failure of the measure to provide for the manufacture of fertilizer was denounced by Representative Frothingham (Rep., Mass.). "The great need of the farmers is for cheap fertilizer and this certainly should be the only reason for selling out such an enormous plant as this," he said.

DOLLINGS HEADS CONVICTED

Benham and Harrison Found Guilty of Misusing the Mails.

Columbus, March 7.—After two hours' deliberation the federal grand jury returned a verdict of guilty against President William G. Benham and Vice President Dwight Harrison of the Dollings company, who were charged with using the mails to defraud. Motion for a new trial will be heard next Monday by Federal Judge Sater. Charges against Benham and Harrison grew out of failure of the R. L. Dollings company, a brokerage concern, which marketed preferred stock for 33 subsidiary concerns. The allegations of the indictment were that Harrison and Benham were in control of the Dollings company; that they advertised the preferred stock of 13 corporations whose securities they marketed, and that by means of charter provisions mailed to customers, they represented that a dividend guarantee fund existed for the protection of stockholders. The prosecution alleged Benham and Harrison represented the various concerns to be sound and safe investments.

Freed by Court.

Cleveland, March 7.—Mrs. Nettie Annelli, 20; Philip Annelli, her husband's cousin, and Vito Devillo, charged with murder in connection with the death of two men during a pistol battle here two weeks ago, were freed by court when the grand jury failed to indict. Engineer Killed.

Portsmouth, Iowa, March 7.—Tom Peedy, engineer of the Pacific Limited on the Chicago, Milwaukee and St. Paul railroad, was killed when the train was derailed near here. No other injuries to members of the crew or passengers were reported. The engine tipped over after leaving the tracks.

TO STUDY MINERAL WEALTH IN ALASKA

Survey of 36,000 Miles of Wilderness Planned.

Washington.—In its latest search for valuable mineral wealth the government is sending a party of expert geologists and topographic engineers on a midwinter expedition to the tip of Alaska on the Arctic, to survey some 36,000 square miles of uncharted wilderness, rugged mountain chains and large stretches of undulating treeless plains.

A few days ago the geological survey told of the plans to send, at the expense of the Navy department, a small party of government technicians to northern Alaska to survey lands embraced in the navy's largest petroleum preserve, but little could be gathered from the brief announcement as to the hazards and hardships this little band of men probably will face.

Southern Portions Surveyed.

Much of the region south of the reserve already has been surveyed by a party under direction of Dr. Philip S. Smith, leader of the party now on its way to the Far North, and portions east of it also have been examined by J. M. Mertie, another member of this winter's expedition.

The present party, in addition to Doctor Smith and Mertie, will consist of William T. Foran, geologist; Gerald Fitzgerald and R. K. Lynt, topographic engineers, and several assistants. It will enter the region from the south, starting in midwinter when some of the transportation problems are least difficult. It will be left on its own resources for at least six months, and tons of supplies will have to be transported, mainly by dog-sled, for 400 miles, even before reaching the reserve.

At Tanana, dog teams will be purchased and packers, camp hands and dog-team drivers will be employed. From Tanana the technical members of the party will go forth with four teams, comprising 30 dogs, followed by slower freight teams. From Nenana the route leads down the Tanana river to Tanana, thence along the mail trail overland nearly 150 miles to the little mission of St. John's-in-the-Wilderness. From here the route will follow the Alatna river, a tributary of the Koyukuk, which rises in the high, rugged mountains that form the southern border of the naval reserve.

About 150 miles up the Alatna, the northern limit of timber lands, the party will establish a headquarters camp, from which it will explore the adjacent regions.

Will Kill Own Food.

From here on for a distance of 700 miles, over a vast stretch of tundra, the expedition will have to use kerosene for cooking food, which will consist of moose, mountain sheep, caribou, ptarmigan, fish and the small black bears of northern Alaska, the latter to contribute materially to the provisioning of the dog teams.

These explorations will determine the most feasible pass across the mountains, and when found the party will move northward to the drainage basin of some tributary of the Colville river. Here two canoes will be reached with enough supplies to last four men a period of three months. The expedition will then push along to the west.

By this time the summer season will be near at hand and sledding no longer will be possible. One party of four will then return to the cache on the headwater stream of the Colville, while the other remains on the tributary of the Meade, each awaiting the break-up of the streams, after which the rest of the journey will be made by canoe.

After the ice breaks, the parties will descend the streams, mapping them and the surrounding country in addition to making geological researches. The Colville party later will make a portage across country to the Chipp or Ikkipung river and descend it to Dense Inlet, a bay lying about twenty-five miles east of Point Barrow. Meade river also enters this inlet and when the two parties meet here the survey of the region will have been practically completed. Return will be by way of Point Barrow, Nome and Seattle.

Farm Scientists Are Still Going to School

Washington, D. C.—Workers in the United States Department of Agriculture are continually going to school and trying to increase their knowledge of the work which they are doing. A graduate school in practical agricultural problems is carried on within the department each winter in order to give department workers a chance to continue their training and keep up-to-date in scientific agriculture. Only work in practical subjects such as marketing, plant breeding and the like is given. The school is unofficial and self-supporting. The instructors come from the department or are authorities in other lines of agriculture work.

Safeguarding the Children.

Frederick Burlingham, American explorer, just returned from central Borneo, tells of methods employed by natives to protect young children from wild boar, boa constrictors, and poisonous insects. The children are swathed in garments and swung on rattan vines suspended between trees. Crocodiles take a large toll of children in Borneo, says the explorer, despite precautions taken.

GIRL OPERATOR

RUNS BLOCKADE

Evades Reporters After Exciting Experience.

Texas City.—The sea still offers romance, although those who are mixed in it take their experiences as matters of fact, and it remains for landmen to spin the yarns.

A bit of the unusual came to light when it was learned that the tanker Eugene V. Thayer, which was heralded as having run the federal blockade at Tampico recently, carried as her wireless operator Miss Lena Mickelsen, daughter of the captain. True, the ship came through without being molested, but this pair had come in contact with the Mexicans enough to know that they often do the unexpected, and a single explosive shell would have sent the tanker and her cargo of crude oil into oblivion. Nevertheless Miss Mickelsen appeared to have regarded the incident as a lark.

She has been with her father as wireless operator for seven years, and says that she finds it much more interesting than staying ashore. She is just a slip of a girl, with big dark eyes, garbed in starched overalls, and heavy wool stockings. She had not found it necessary to sacrifice her hair for her career, and it is piled on top of her head.

Miss Mickelsen took things calmly, and she would not become interested in the uniqueness of her position enough to discuss it to any considerable length, except to mention in casual conversation a few of the ports where she had been ashore and points of interest there. She added that she derived considerable entertainment from "listening in" on the big wireless stations of the world and that her work kept her busy.

Plane for Every 1,000

Persons, Fokker Says

Cleveland, O.—There will be one airplane for every 1,000 people "in a very short time," and the airplane will be used as casually for intercity transportation as the taxicab now is for short trips within the city, Anthony H. G. Fokker, Dutch aviation expert, predicted before the Cleveland chamber of commerce.

Declaring that if planes are handled "by the right men" and are well made, commercial aviation is safe, Fokker said that the planes are available if suitable landing fields are provided. America, he said, instead of lagging in commercial aviation, should lead, because of its great distances.

TOTAL TAX COLLECTION

For December Nearly One Million Dollars—Decrease of $27,932.33.

Drop Due to Lower Average Rate of Taxation for Same Period of Time—Total Unpaid Taxes Show a Decrease of $11,475.56.

County Treasurer Harry Moore has announced that the total collection of taxes for Pickaway county for the December, 1923 period, amounted to $938,408.76, a total of $27,932.33, less than amount of the taxes collected on real estate for the December, 1922 period.

The drop in the taxes for the past half year is directly due to the lower tax rate in the county. The average tax rate of the county for the past half year was twenty-four and a half cents less per thousand than the rate for 1922, which explains the difference in the amount of taxes collected.

County Treasurer Moore has compiled the total of unpaid taxes in the county on real estate for the December, 1923, collection, the figures showing a total of $19,643.01 as compared with the sum of $31,119.57 for the same period in 1922, a difference of $11,476.56.

The decrease in unpaid taxes is one of the surprises of the year. It was expected that conditions existing at the present time would cause a big jump in the total of taxes left unpaid at the close of tax books. The tax rate in the city of Circleville in the December, 1922, period, was an even $20 a thousand. In the same period, for 1923, it was $19.30 a thousand.

Treasurer Moore reports that the largest collection for any one day was made on December 19, 1923, a total of $35,922.66. In the previous year, 1922 same period, one day, a collection of $85,000 was made, but this was settlement day with the banks; a number of banks in this city and adjoining counties pay their customers taxes and then later settle with the county treasurer.

The complete list of total amounts of unpaid taxes is given by townships as follows:

Total amount collected in 1922	$ 966,341 09
Total unpaid in 1922	31,119 57
Total amount collected in 1923	938,408 76
Total amount unpaid in 1923	19,643 01
The table shows the amount of unpaid taxes on real property in the various townships in 1923:

Why Frankfurt.

King Carl the Great (Charlemagne) was once defeated by the Saxons, and fled with his Franks to the Main. But they could find no fording place by which to escape the pursuit of their enemies. Suddenly a cart appeared and made for a spot where it crossed easily, thus showing the Franks where the river was fordable. So they came across the Main, and the place has ever since been called "Frankfurt" (the ford of the Franks).

GLASS FACTORY

Big Glass Plant Burns at Lancaster—Loss Half a Million.

Fire that for a time threatened many nearby residences, swept the Hocking Glass Plant at Lancaster, shortly after Thursday midnight. At 1:30 o'clock this morning, owners of the place said none of the 600 employees of the plant could return to work today.
Loss was estimated by firemen at $500,000. The plant was destroyed. Fireman from Lancaster volunteered their services to assist the glass plant's fire department in fighting the blaze, which was urged on in its progress by a strong west wind, making the work of the firemen more difficult.
Origin of the blaze could not be determined.
The plant covers an area of two blocks. Its owners, I. J. Collins, president, Thomas Fulton, secretary-treasurer, and E. B. Good, Los Angeles, own another similar establishment in East Lancaster. The company manufactures vases and other articles of glassware.

AMUSEMENTS

Viola Dana's distinctive personality and unique talent as a screen comedienne is given ample opportunity for a display of its best work in "Crinoline and Romance," the new Metro photoplay which was enjoyed by large audiences yesterday at the Met theater, where it began a run of two days. The latest photoplay starring this magnetic miss was voted by all who saw it as the most entertaining of a decidedly entertaining series of motion picture plays in which she has appeared.

Every characterization in which this gifted star has been seen is totally different from any other. There is no more delightful person in Miss Dana's whole gallery than her present one—Miss Emmy Lou—a charming, unsophisticated southern miss whose adoring but stern grandfather has kept her in the most complete seclusion. Emmy, being human, lets her curiosity get the best of her. With her colored mammy, she goes off to see life, or more specifically, that variety of it which is found in the ultra-fashionable home of her aunt.

Emmy's experiences with a modern crowd of "advanced" flappers and their beaux is a revelation to her; and after breaking several hearts, she returns to her likewise heartbroken guardian, with two of the more persistent suitors still on her trail.

Miss Dana receives excellent support from a truly notable cast. There are two leading men in the picture, Allan Forrest and John Bowers, the two rivals for Emmy's hand. Claude Gillingwater is the southern colonel, Emmy's grandfather, stern but kindly. Others worthy of mention are Gertrude Short and Lillian Lawrence.

The photoplay, a Harry Beaumont production for Metro Pictures Corporation, was written and adapted by Bernard McConville. John Arnold was cameraman.

Seeing Him Home.

I was coming home from a dance, and I didn't want my escort, whom I had just met that evening, to know where I resided. We were walking down the street and I saw a pretty house. I stopped in front of this house and told my escort that I lived there and was obliged for his attention and kindness in taking me home. A look of bewilderment broke out on his face as he said, "Holy smoke, how do you live there when I live there?"

LEASE IN DOUBT

Hauling of Coal Over Spur to Hocking Valley Line Affected by Controversy.

The five-year lease held by the Van Swearingen interests, under which the Chesapeake & Ohio railroad used the Norfolk & Western track to deliver coal to the Hocking Valley at Valley Crossing has expired and altho officials of the Chesapeake & Ohio recently said that a new 99-year lease had been closed, N. D. Maher, president of the Norfolk & Western, denied Thursday that such a new lease exists.

With the announcement of such a lease railroad men saw in the arrangement a four-track system which would be installed from Waverly to Columbus. Without the lease it is thought the extension will not be made and if the lease has been signed the Norfolk and Western soon must add two tracks, as it now has its hands full handling the ordinary coal business of the Chesapeake & Ohio and its own.

Railroad men say that if the Chesapeake & Ohio does not hold the lease it will be compelled to bring its line thru to Columbus. The four-track plan under the lease is the logical solution they say, for it would solve the Chesapeake & Ohio problem and would mean a conservation of capital. It is stated further the Norfolk & Western would not grant a long-time lease unless it contemplated some such expansion and which its business is demanding.—Columbus Dispatch.

Appeals Damage Suit.

The damage suit of Delano and Reeca Klingensmith, administrators of the estate of Edward Leroy Klingensmith against The Scioto Valley Traction company in which they ask damages in the sum of $35,000 for the defendants, causing as they claim, the death of their son, who was electrocuted by coming in contact with the company's high tension wires, have appealed the case which was lost in the lower court to the court of appeals on error. Meeker, Terwilliger and Barton Walters represent the plaintiff and Oscar W. Newman of Columbus and Charles Gerhardt of this city, the defendants.

Mankinds' Wastefulness.

Macquarie Island, sought by Sir Douglas Mawson as a sanctuary for the Antarctic fauna, is nearly 400 square miles in area, lying 900 miles from Tasmania, in latitude 55 degrees south. Penguins of various species, sea elephants and seals exist here in vast numbers, but are being ruthlessly slaughtered for their oil. A flightless parrot, living on the island when it was discovered in 1810, has been exterminated by cats turned loose and allowed to run wild.

New Fossil Beds Discovered.

What is pronounced by scientists as one of the most perfect fossil beds in the United States in respect to preservation, has been uncovered in the mountains near Kemmerer, Wyo. The fossils are those of fish bodies and represent more than a dozen distinct types, several of which, it is said, have been hitherto unknown to the scientific world. The entire bodies, in several cases, are intact, and the bones and tissues, usually obliterated, are clearly definable.

Conversation.

This business of conversation is a very serious matter. There are men that it weakens one to talk with an hour more than a day's fasting would do. Mark this that I am going to say, for it is as good as a working professional man's advice, and costs you nothing: It is better to lose a pint of blood from your veins than to have a nerve tapped. Nobody measures your nervous force as it runs away, nor bandages your brain and marrow after the operation.

A STORY THAT HAS NO MORAL

By BELLE WITKIN

(©, 1924, by McClure Newspaper Syndicate)

HE WAS twenty-one years old, and therefore, a man. Herbert never forgot it—except for one evening—why should anyone else? Herbert was in love. She was the dearest, the most beautiful, the most adorable little girl Grace, the other girl—who was not in any sense the "other woman"—was a friend to both of them. The girl always asked her advice about such grave matters as the right shade of face powder to use and whether one should continue in bobbed hair or let it grow long again, and she invariably did the opposite thing, which was what Grace had counted on in the first place.

As for Lita, she was purely and simply what is known as a "gold digger." She managed to conceal it from Herbert with an ingenuity that aroused admiration in Grace. Grace was sorry for Herbert.

Confidence became the usual thing for Grace. She heard them from both sides—at all times and seasons.

Herbert was studying hard at Tech, winning honors and devising ways and means of getting home for week-end trips. He paused often to wonder why Lita didn't answer his every letter (he wrote only once a day). He wrote sometimes to Grace, too. These letters were all of Lita. Lita had said this, that and the other thing; Lita didn't write regularly; why didn't she Lita denied flirting outrageously with Johnny West; was it really true? Heel was human if he was twenty-one; he would be down for the next week-end; she was such a good sport to listen to all his ravings; but, seriously, hadn't she noticed a change in Lita these last few weeks?

Lita finally disclosed the fact that she couldn't waste time on a practically penniless college student. Mother said she shouldn't, and Lita made it a point always to obey Mother (when Mother's orders coincided with her own desires).

Herbert was overworked and heart-sick—and acquired indigestion. He was sent home to recuperate and came as was natural (though this he did not know) to Grace. The whole, bitter story came out and the man of twenty-one broke down entirely and sobbed like the boy of twenty-one he really was.

It hurts to see a man's tears—hurts deeply. When the man is the Man of all Others (Grace was only twenty herself) it is harder. Consider, then, when the Man whose coming brings all the light of the world, sobs brokenly for another.

But Grace was a girl, and the female of the species must never show a hurt of this kind; it isn't considered good form. So she found strength to comfort the hurt boy, to soothe the tortured mind with words of new and priceless wisdom. Herbert, leaving, knew Grace to be an angel of goodness to bother with him; he must have made a fool, a perfect child, of himself. Grace smiled and sent him home to get the first peaceful sleep he had enjoyed for weeks. After he had left she walked the floor for hours.

The next day came, in spite of the fact that Herbert's heart was broken and Grace miserable. Days have a way of doing that. Grace spent a wretched morning, singing occasionally in the attempt to convince herself that everything would turn out beautifully, and now and then laughing hysterically at herself for being so very foolish.

There came a ring at the doorbell and Herbert walked in. He came straight to Grace, forgetting his usual greeting to Bolo, Grace's Belgian Shepherd. (Not that they weren't on speaking terms, but Herbert was plainly preoccupied.) Bolo, however, being a philosophical canine, didn't take it to heart. He very calmly settled down on the rug for a nap.

Herbert, it seemed, had done Lita a great injustice. She really cared a lot about him (she told him so herself in an early morning note), it was her mother who had raised objections. (Herbert was already a Phi Beta Kappa man, and Phi Beta Kappa were all the rage just now. This, Lita kept to herself.)

Herbert was a different being from the boy who had come to her yesterday. The world was a glorious place and he realized now what a child he had been. He was immensely grateful to Grace and so sorry to have troubled her. She was an awfully good sport and all that. Would she mind if he left her now? He really hadn't a moment to spare, having promised to call for Lita—they were going for a walk.

Grace smiled and told him to run along. Of course she didn't mind! No doubt, it was to prove that she didn't mind that she ran to her room and sobbed herself into a very painful headache, and in the evening quarreled most unreasonably with a devoted but bewildered young man (who she married when she had reached that age when she could look back and smile at this experience without forgetting the hurt of it).

Herbert, some years later, married Lita—who didn't in the least deserve it. She likes to spend the fortune that Herbert, being a brilliant young man, is accumulating. She leads her social set, plays a good game of bridge, and thinks she loves Herbert, who is perfectly happy.

This story has no moral and doesn't prove a thing.

Bell Foiled Thieves.

Among records of stolen bells is that of one from Solissons in Burgundy, which Clothaire carried away. The bell objected to the act by gradually becoming dumb on the journey to Paris, where its voice was discovered gone. But its voice returned in such full force when the bell was sent home that its tone could be heard seven miles distant.

Hut of Beer Bottles

Far out on the Mojave desert, between Searchlight and Silver City, Cal., is a house that revives memories of days gone by. It is constructed to a great extent of beer bottles, the Los Angeles Times relates.

Light ones and dark ones, many of them bearing labels of former well-known brewers, are pressed into the walls of the adobe structure. Twenty layers of bottles line each wall, making a total of some three hundred dozen bottles that attest the mighty thirst of the unknown "desert rat" who constructed the unique habitation.

Record for Potatoes.

The department of agriculture says that the weight of the largest potato recorded in their office is between seven and eight pounds. There may have been larger ones produced, but the department has no record of them.

"Intellectuals" Think
Dirt Is Mark of Genius

The evolution of the "intellectual genius" can best be studied at close range in Greenwich Village, New York city, the congregating point for the sex-stuff writers and their friends.

In one of the cross streets off the lower end of Washington square is a "coffee house" equipped with low divans covered with pieces of ragged old carpet, and chairs and benches cut down to bring their users close to the floor. The lighting is subdued, the air heavy with cigarette smoke, and an open fireplace cheats in warmth, for its log is painted red, and the flame an effect in color from a concealed electric bulb.

"They come in here, many of them," remarked the proprietor, who has kept at close grips with his sense of humor, "and I have often revolted at their dirty collars, unwashed necks, long, streaky hair and generally untidy appearance. But it is not because of the scarcity of soap or the lack of baths. To be unclean, shiftless and conspicuous through that pose is as studied a part as taken by the Broadway actor who makes up for a character in a play."

"Johnson, Swift and others of their period set a precedent for literary men by arraying themselves in simple clothing which they wore out. But they kept clean. They did not carry their contempt of the mob to the extent of going about unwashed. Down here in the village the imitators of the Mid-Victorian and earlier intellectual giants decided that if they would go about in dirty linen and clothing they might attract attention."—Philadelphia Public Ledger.

Efficient

Constant vigilance goes hand in hand with safety on the Pennsylvania Railroad. Thousands of tests are made every month to insure the observance of signals and operating rules by the men in charge of trains. During the last half of 1923, 493,000 such tests were made.

Some of the situations covered by these tests are the observance of "stop" and "caution" signals, the proper display of signals, the observance of speed regulations and the proper flagging of trains. This system has been in effect on the Pennsylvania Railroad for many years. It is designed to cover not only every conceivable development in ordinary operating conditions but also surprise situations not usually encountered.

It is a splendid tribute to the efficiency and the high morale of Pennsylvania employees—and a source also of profound satisfaction to the traveling public—that the results of these tests show that the number of "failures" is relatively insignificant—the record over a long period of months showing a 99.9 per cent performance.

IN DORY, HE STARTS ON 10,000-MILE TRIP

Leaves Honolulu Without Nautical Chart or Anchor.

Honolulu, Hawaiian Islands.—No nautical event of recent times in Honolulu excited more widespread interest than the departure from here recently, of Ira C. Sparks for the Holy Land. He is a landlubber of Peru, Ind., and he embarked alone in a 23-foot dory, which he built with his own hands. To reach a Palestine port he must cross several of the seven seas and cover a distance of more than 10,000 miles. He set sail without anchor or nautical chart.

So interested were the United States naval authorities in the remarkable adventure which Sparks has undertaken that, when it was learned he had nothing with him to mark his bearings on the great expanse of ocean, a special navy seaplane scouted for Sparks' small craft and found it the second day after his departure from Honolulu, making its way slowly westward, 75 miles off shore. A nautical chart and a message of good wishes and good will, sealed in a water-tight can, were dropped into Sparks' boat from the seaplane.

Known as Fanatic.

Seaplanes from the naval air station here kept in touch with Sparks until after the third day, when he was reported still moving along toward the west, being about 125 miles away from his starting point when last sighted.

Sparks is known here as a religious fanatic. He first came into public notice just a year ago when he was discovered in a packing box on a trans-Pacific liner, as the vessel was nearing Honolulu. Sparks had shipped himself in the box as freight. He was taken off the ship here and kept in jail a few days, but his cheerful and kind demeanor won the friendship of the local authorities and he was permitted to go free. He got a job as carpenter at the Pearl Harbor naval station and began laying his plans for continuing his journey to the Holy Land.

With his earnings he bought a whale-boat, but, when he tested it, he found it unseaworthy. He blew it up with dynamite and then set about building his own boat. In this work he was assisted by experienced navigators, who designed the dory for him and gave him advice in the matter of outfitting the craft for the long cruise.

Finds Himself a Hero.

When the hour approached for casting off Sparks found himself a hero, not only of the hardened habitués of the water front but of hundreds of other people of Honolulu who were at the dock to bid him Godspeed. Hoisting the sail and hauling in the line, Sparks bade adieu to Honolulu.

"I hate to leave you boys!" he called to a group of stevedores.

"Where is your anchor?" some one asked.

"I don't need one; I am not going to stop until I get there," was the reply.

Sparks had on board when he left here 80 gallons of water and enough hardtack and other food supplies to last him 100 days. His route is via the Marshall Islands and New Guinea, thence to Asiatic coastal waters. He carries no clearance papers or passports. It is said clearance papers only apply to vessels of 500 tons and upward.

It was in deference to a request of his parents, who live at Peru, that Sparks deferred several weeks starting on his long voyage. They had pleaded with him not to attempt the big adventure, but it is said he finally obtained their consent.

"I have faith that I shall succeed," Sparks said.

It is the expressed opinion of some experienced navigators here that faith may carry him through the many dangers of the deep. As to what he plans to do should he reach the Holy Land, Sparks seemed to have no very clear idea. The "call" came to him to go, and the work will be provided when he reaches there, he asserted.

Sparks is thirty years old and of striking appearance. He is of large build and wears long hair and a flowing black beard.

Dancer Stirrs London by Hair Glow in Dark

London.—A dancer at one of London's night clubs recently introduced the latest effort of the coiffeur, namely, hair which glows with a phosphoric iridescence in the dark.

Nothing could be detected when the ballroom lights were on, but when they were switched off the dancer could be distinguished by the greenish silvery halo around her head.

The dancer's glow induced by a tonic she loves. Her luminous, pretty happy. ought into. Es story has no more a thing.

Milkweed Seeds.

The milkweed seeds are concealed in a pod, which breaks open and exposes them to the wind. Up they go through the air, each seed carried by a ball of silky down, the threads so frail that you are astonished when you examine them with a microscope. Each thread turns out to be a separate tube ribbed with dark vein-like streaks arranged in an irregular manner. When a milkweed pod bursts open, you can imagine yourself at a miniature aero meet, in which scores of white craft soar up into the morning wind.

"The Store That Treats You Right"

There Is Mail Waiting For You In Wall Street----

We may be mistaken but we believe that the average man thinks he can do certain things better than his neighbor---

For example--tuning in a Radio--or backing a car into a parking space--or running the country.

We'll go further and say that there may be some man in town who thinks that while we are all right in our way--he can do better in price somewhere else.

To that man we say this; for our quality goods--for our type of merchandise--if you can beat, or in some cases equal, our low prices--you are wasting your time here in Circleville --you'd make a fortune in Wall Street.

CONFIDENCE

The most beautiful of all human relationships are based on CONFIDENCE. Love is based on confidence, friendship is based on confidence, happy marriages are based on confidence; and so, confidence is the highest aim a business institution can achieve, because it introduces into the processes of buying and selling, something of the unselfish quality of those sacred human relationships that are untouched and uncontaminated by money. This store never wants to be guilty of such bad taste as to claim perfection, but it makes no secret of its ambition to foster and deserve at all times the confidence of its customers.

There is no higher success than TO BE BELIEVED IN!
